Glymas, Now Yachtsman.

The New York Evening Post points out the fact that Carlyle's favorite defdevelopments. In place of the old standard "he keeps a gig" we have substituted "he has a steam yacht." Most amusing was this latter day measure of wealth brought out in the standard "he keeps a gig" we have letters from Paris of the promoter in search of an underwriter. Question arose as to the financial responsibility is the best syrup to eat on your of rating the fellow. But how did he go to work? Did he go to the banks. the agencies, the bourse? No; he simply observed the man's manner of life. When he discovered that the backward underwriter kept a yacht his doubts were instantly relieved, and he cabled the joyful news to New York. Evidently, we say, in the lexicens of today we must look to see the entry. "Gigman; modern, yachteman."
